

The Journal of Premier Research recognizes the importance of copyright, licensing, and intellectual property rights in scholarly publishing. The journal has established clear policies to govern these areas, ensuring proper attribution, protection of authors' rights, and dissemination of knowledge. Here's an explanation of the journal's policies on copyright, licensing, and intellectual property rights:

1. Copyright Ownership:

- Authors retain the copyright to their original work published in the Journal of Premier Research. The journal respects the rights of authors as creators and acknowledges their ownership of the intellectual property contained in their manuscripts.
- By submitting their work to the Journal of Premier Research, authors grant the journal a non-exclusive license to publish, distribute, and disseminate their manuscript in both print and electronic formats.

2. Licensing:

- The Journal of Premier Research typically uses Creative Commons licenses to govern the distribution and use of published content. Creative Commons licenses offer various levels of permissions and restrictions, allowing authors to specify how their work can be shared, reused, or adapted by others.
- Authors may choose a Creative Commons license that best aligns with their preferences and goals for sharing and dissemination.

3. Open Access:

- The Journal of Premier Research is committed to open access publishing, making research findings freely available to the global community without barriers to access. Open access promotes greater visibility, impact, and reach for scholarly research by removing subscription and paywall restrictions.
- Authors publishing in the Journal of Premier Research have the option to choose open access for their articles, allowing anyone to read, download, and distribute their work without restrictions.

4. Author Responsibilities:

- Authors are responsible for ensuring that their submissions comply with copyright laws and regulations. This includes obtaining necessary permissions for any third-party content (such as images, figures, or excerpts) included in their manuscripts.
- Authors should properly attribute sources and obtain permission to use copyrighted material when necessary. Failure to do so may result in copyright infringement and legal consequences.

5. Journal Responsibilities:

- The Journal of Premier Research is committed to upholding the principles of ethical publishing and respecting the rights of authors and content creators.
- The journal ensures that published content complies with copyright laws and licensing agreements. Any requests for reprints, permissions, or use of published material are handled in accordance with established policies and procedures.

6. Accessibility and Reuse:

- The Journal of Premier Research supports the reuse and dissemination of published content for non-commercial and educational purposes. Authors are encouraged to share their work openly and contribute to the advancement of knowledge in the field.
- Published articles in the Journal of Premier Research are typically archived in digital repositories and databases, ensuring long-term accessibility and preservation of scholarly research.

In summary, the Journal of Premier Research is committed to protecting the rights of authors while promoting open access and sharing of knowledge. The journal's policies on copyright, licensing, and intellectual property rights aim to balance the interests of authors, readers, and the broader academic community, fostering collaboration, innovation, and advancement in premier research.